Dear Friend of the Arts,

March is going to be a joy filled month at the Center! On Leap Day, we have the opening reception for our third annual Broad Ideas exhibit and month-long series of events. Over a hundred artists are participating in Broad Ideas! I hope you will join us for a number of these activities, including the wonderful play, Love, Loss, and What I Wore. Many of these events are free, and for the events that call for admission, if anyone wants to attend but can't afford it, volunteer opportunities are available. We will have free child care available for every event. Scroll down for details!

We also have the excitement of a new art opening, featuring the artwork of Barbara Heitzman. Barbara's opening will be the same night that we have our opening for the play, so you can have a whole evening to celebrate art: come to the art opening around 5 pm, and then go downstairs for the performance which starts at 7. This is the first time we have had an opening followed by a performance, so let us know if you like having them together.

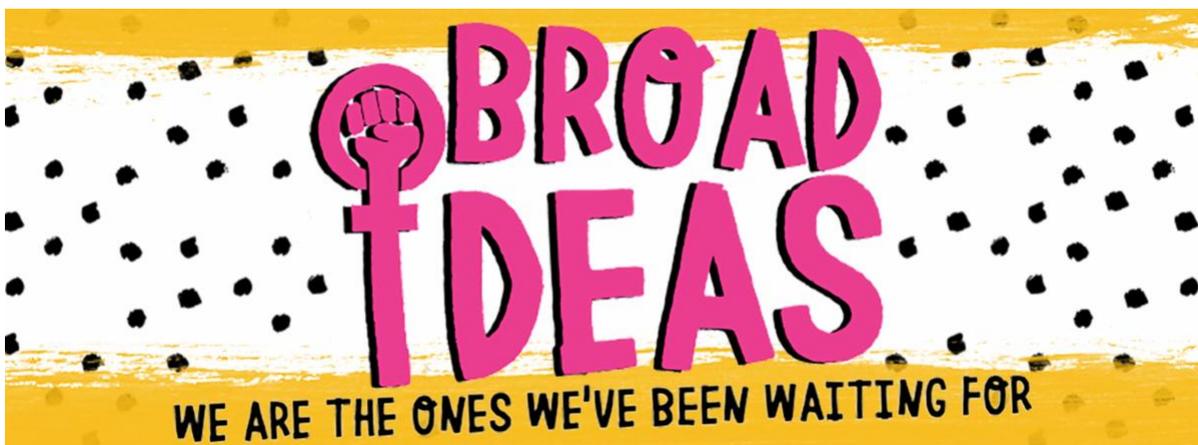

Looking forward to seeing you in March!

Carole

Volunteer of the Month Jean Dregne

Jean Dregne, Board member of the Center for the Arts, has had two lifelong passions. Even as a young child, she knew she wanted to be a teacher, and she loved music. Her devotion to music and to education have given her joy and stayed with her throughout her life. “Without art and music,” she muses, “there is no life.”

Jean began playing the piano at age five. As a young adult, she also took voice lessons. Pursuing her dream, in college she majored in both vocal music and education. One of her fondest memories from her student days is of going to the rehearsals of Chicago's Lyric Opera—and getting to sit in the front row. She even sang in the chorus of two operas, including La Traviata.

Becoming a music teacher was a natural path for Jean, one she has loved. Throughout her career, she taught vocal music at the middle school level. She enjoys all kinds of music and would use whatever the kids liked to “hook” them. Rap, she says, is a wonderful way to teach rhythm patterns. One of her goals was for her kids to learn to read music, so she introduced it to them so gradually they hardly realized they weren't just having fun.

Jean retired in 2002 and moved to Galena in 2008, where she has continued to be active. She has done some substitute teaching, and serves on the Board of Prairie Ridge. As choir director at the First Presbyterian Church for about five years, she enjoys leading the small but dedicated group of singers. As a Board member of the Center for the Arts, she is excited about all the Center offers the community, visitors, and the all artists who work and display their talents here.

Asked about her role on the Board, she says, “As an avid lover of music and arts, I am thrilled to come here and contribute.” She is excited about the idea of having a real theater for musical and theatrical performance. As an educator, it is not surprising that she would especially like to see more children and young people come to the Center. “The arts help them grow,” she declares confidently, having personally fostered and witnessed that effect in her many years of teaching.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Feature Gallery Exhibit

April is Autism Acceptance Month

Art is a cathartic outlet for many reasons. It’s a way to express feelings that you can’t easily articulate or advocate for a cause or a belief. And, for some, it can also be a means of making a living. This can especially be important for people on the autism spectrum, some of whom have difficulty with communication.

Visit our Feature Gallery during the months of April and May and view pieces created by local individuals on the Autism Spectrum.
